I hope this book will help you recollect your years at CHS, and help keep the memories and special achievements close to you.

Thanks to the staff for all the hard work and time you each put in. It would've been impossible without you, and the effort is greatly appreciated. A special thanks to Susan who worked extra-long and extra-hard. Good Luck next year, Susan.

The Editor

YEAR 2000

It was a bright, clear, sunny morning, a perfect day to give a speech. Shawn Story looked at the growing crowd with satisfaction. It had taken hard work, but he finally done it. He now controlled the Black Hills.

Alexa Rose, his former classmate, appeared at his side. As Shawn's political advisor and career counselor, she was pleased with his success. After taking over all of Germany, she felt that she was perfectly qualified to help Mr. Story.

"Oh, look, Chief!" she exclaimed, pointing to a black limousine that had just pulled up. There's one of our first honored guests."

As the long, shiny car pulled up, a crowd of screaming girls rushed to surround the emerging figure. "It's BIG Ken!" they all squealed in delight.

Kenny Bigelow was now the biggest Chippendales' star to hit the Hollywood scene. Warner Brothers had offered him a 35 million dollar contract to appear in the next Commando movie but he had turned them down. He felt that he was too busy swinging his bod and collecting money in his hip huggles. A movie would just take him away from the fans who loved him so much.

Shawn, amidst a group of secret chieftains, greeted Ken with a handshake. Ken simply handed him a flyer that read: "Put my face on Mt. Rushmore . . . Do a service to America."

"Sorry, Ken," Said Shawn, tossing the paper over his shoulder, "but I'm saving a spot for Mr. Grayot."

"Aw, come on, Shawn. I'm an old friend. I'll even give you a lifetime supply of all the guns you want from my new store . . . speaking of my store, what should I call it? 'Bigelow's Bullets' or 'Guns & Grenades'? I kinda like the 'Bigelow's Bullets' myself, since it has my name in it . . ."

But Shawn wasn't listening anymore. He moved into the crowd as he saw a jet plane landing in the distance. It was Jody Flakus! A limousine drove her to where Shawn and Kenny stood. Jody, the sexiest college professor in America, who was noted for her unusual computer like brain, was now on her way to the top in show business and the tabloids. Her engagement to Donald Trump after his former mistress was murdered caused much controversy.

"Hi, Jody," greeted Shawn with a grin. "Wow, you turned into a real fox. Wanna be one of my squaws?"

"No thanks," she said with a disdainful little sniff. "I only belong to Donny — and my name isn't Jody."

Big Ken snorted. "So why is he marrying you, anyway?"

"He likes a woman with brains." And with that, she waved to her photographers, motioning them over to the platform where Shawn's grand speech would soon be given. "I like this little scene right here, with those faces carved out up there in the rock. It looks like they're admiring me. Who are those men, anyway?"

"Hi, Jody!" called a voice from below. It was Vonnie Kuil!
"Hi, Vonnie, but my name isn't Jody anymore. It's Alexandra. Alexandra Templeton . . . soon, of course, to be Alexandra Trump."

"How glamorous!" yelled Jeanne, rushing up to hug Alexandra.

"Why do you two smell so bad?" she demanded.
"Oh, I was just practicin' my goat-tyin'," Jeanne grinned.
"I'm still tryin' to graduate from school, you know."

"After 10 years," Vonnie chuckled.

"So, Bonnie," Alexandra turned to her old friend, "What are you doing with yourself?"

"Oh, didn't you know? I'm Jeanne's goat!"
Off in the distance Shawn inspected the newly arrived guests. "Oh, man," he groaned. "Look," he said to BIG Ken as he pointed to the girls in the crowd. "It's Vonnie, the love of my life."

"Oh," Ken replied, not quite understanding since the word "love" wasn't in his vocabulary.

"So, do you think she'll have a affair with me?" asked Shawn, hopefully.

"Oh, hi Shawn!" yelled a voice from within the crowd. Pretty soon David and Julie appeared at his side looking very happy. Shawn wondered why, because the last he heard was that David got kicked out of Spain. It seemed that his face caused an image problem that the government didn't like.

"Oh, hi guys, I see you got the invitations. You know this is a great occasion for me. This speech will go down in history."

"We know," said Julie. "Congratulations."

"But you should be congratulating us," Dave interrupted. "We just got married."

"Here," BIG Ken shoved in and thrust a piece of paper in their faces. "Do a service to America."

At that moment a large figure dressed in tights and a sweater bounced over to the classmates of 1990, waving pom-poms in the air, yelling something about taking a ball someplace.

The group stared at him, wide-eyed and open-mouthed, not quite believing . . . could it be? . . . no . . . but it was . . . after years of hard work and struggle, Bahn Bertram had finally made it to the NFL . . . as a Dallas Cowboy . . . cheerleader!!!

Kenny threw him a flyer. After reading it, Rahn enthusiastically broke into a cheer: "Ken is great, Ken is great, put his face on Mt. Rushmore!"

Alexandra rolled her eyes. "Gawd, a cheerleader who looks terrible in tights and can't rhyme. Lord help us."

Vonnie shook her head in disappointment. "It's a waste of a good-looking man, if you ask me."

But Jeanne took it the hardest. "No, this can't be!" she cried. "He's turned into a bubble-brain . . . and he isn't even blond."

"Hey, watch the blond jokes," snapped a voice from behind. They all turned around and were greeted with another surprise. They couldn't believe it. Could this gum-cracking, whip-lashing-wed girl with the teased out hair possibly be . . .

"Karla?" they all gasped at once.

"In the flesh," she answered. "Speaking of flesh, you could lose a little. I'm the best aerobics instructor this side of the Hills. One week in my gym, and you'll be trimmed down in no time."

They realized that she was talking to someone behind them and they all whirled around again to see what looked like a very large balloon with Bobby's head on it.

"Bobby?!" they all yelled.

"OK, out of the way everyone. Make room for the world's heaviest woman," called a voice from behind Bobby. It was Teresa Fletcher.

"You've got to be kidding," Julie drawled.

"No, seriously," said Bobby. "I broke the record last night after I ate four pizza."

"Wait a minute," Shawn interjected. "I don't want my speech to be interrupted by this . . . this freak show."

"Oh, don't worry," said Teresa. "I'm Bobby's promoter. But it's OK, I won't promote her here. Your speech will be fine."

"So just how much does she weight?" Alexa asked.

At just that moment a motorcycle sped through the crowd and stopped right in front of the classmates. Aaron Davis got off his bike and greeted the crowd with a smile.

"Hi Aaron," they all said in unison.

"Hi, guys. You're lucky I'm here today."

"Oh, why's that?" asked Bobby.

"I ran out of formaldehyde at my funeral home. I should've taken all the bodies to the deep freezer today, but I decided to come here instead." He saw the worried looks on their faces. "Oh, don't worry," he tried to reassure them. "Things oughta be OK. There weren't that many bodies, so you shouldn't be able to smell it from here."

At that moment a nun walked slowly to the crowd. "How nice to see you all again," she said softly.

"Theresa?!" gasped Teresa Fletcher in astonishment "That can't be you!"

"It's Mother Theresa," she corrected.

Oh, that's who those men were," said Jody.

"Where's Big Ken?" Theresa strained her neck to get better look at the crowd, searching for her true love. "I want him to be my pope."

Vonnie scinkered. "He's off campaigning. He thinks they should put his face up there with the dead presidents."

Oh, that's who those men were," said Jody.

Just then a jet airplane flew overhead with the letters printed on it "GARY".

As soon as it landed, Gary Vrbsky, the world's most famous hairstylist, was soon with his former classmates.

"Hi Gary!" they all greeted him enthusiastically.

"Hello, hello," he said with a British accent, as he pulled on a cigarette. "I'm glad I made it. Those permanents are so time consuming- and their not too easy on the hands either."

"Would you like to buy a test tube baby?" a voice asked, much to the group's shock.

A slightly disheveled young blond woman waved some glass containers in the air as her eyes gleamed wildly and her lips pulled into an insane grin.

It was Michele! They all stared at her in amazement.

"Hello, hello," he said with a British accent, as he pulled on a cigarette. "I'm glad I made it. Those permanents are so time consuming- and their not too easy on the hands either."

"Well," Michele began to explain apologetically, "I used to sell test tube babies door-to-door, but nobody seems to want any."

Gary studied her for a moment then said matter-of-factly, "You know, you really cold use a little trim and a hair-lightener to give you some extra pizzaz."

"You must excuse her," said another young blond woman, emerging from the crowd. It was Lexi Ring! "She's supposed to be on her best behavior today. Now you know what I told you Michele. BeHave. Or else it's the strait-jacket and back to the asylum."

Michele pouted and pointed to Gary accusingly. "He doesn't like the color of my hair."

"Lexi, this must be some kind of a joke," said Bobby, struggling not to lose her balance, since she was laughing so hard. Everyone looked at her warily and moved further away. Having Bobby fall on them would've meant instant death.

So Lexi told the story. It seemed that Michele just couldn't handle the pressures of being a blond. She simply went crazy, and Lexi, being the good friend that she was, vowed to take care of Michele for life.

"Lucky you," Dave muttered under his breath.

"Well," Lexie explained, "I bought the nuthouse because I decided I like being around crazy people - especially blond crazy people. And it all worked out for Michele, too. Now that she's psychotic, she enjoys Darin a lot more."

Just then a tall man in a black trenchcoat ran up to Dave and opened his coat to reveal . . . his birthday suit.

"It's Darin," Michele squealed happily.

Dave was so shaken by the experience that he fainted.

HOMECOMING

On Thursday Sept. 21, 1989 at 8:30 p.m. our coronation was kicked off by the mistress of ceremonies, Jody Flakus. The night was full of suspense and excitement as Jody opened the envelope naming Rahn Bertram, Cowboy and Teresa Fletcher, Cowgirl.

Friday morning started with a lot of anticipation for our Homecoming Parade. The Parade Marshall for our Homecoming Parade was Jim Doty. The parade was a big success even though the weather wouldn't cooperate, but the Juniors pulled through with a win, three years in a row.

Even though Thursday and Friday were exciting nothing would beat watching our Cowboys walk all over the Lake Andes Eagles.

We had a very good year. We finished second in our conference, won our first homecoming game in years, and finished the season with a fine 7-2 record. For a couple of weeks, we were the top ranked team in the state. However, the cold, wet and windy turf at Harding County will forever tarnish our season's memories. Rahn Bertram was the only Cowboy to make the all-state team, his second time.

JUNIOR VARSITY

The Junior Varsity had an excellent season this year. They ended the year with a 13-3 record. Which could mean that in the next upcoming years Colome will have a very strong Girls Basketball team. The team had excellent attitudes, sportsmanship and confidence all through the season.

This has been the Junior Varsity's best year since Mr. Koth and Mr. Furness have been here. They must be doing something right. Good Job girls and the best of luck next year.

The Cowgirls had a very tough schedule this year. They ended their season with 8 wins and 14 losses. Almost all of the games were close and we have to admit, could've gone both ways.

We would like to thank the parents and all our fans who have followed us throughout the year. We'd also like to give warm thanks to the coaches. They are the ones who really deserve our respect. Thanks for being great coaches and friends.

The 1990 Seniors would like to wish next years team the best of luck. We know you can do it!

We ended up the season 4-16, although we still had a successful season. We had 12 letter-winners and 11 of them are back for next year. Jason Hauf was named South Central Conference and Vince Thieman, Honorable Mention.

We lost alot of Mentions and points from last year's team which averaged 65 points per game (62 p.p.g. were lost). So alot of kids gained valuable experience and playing time. Also, injuries plagued us.

We have alot to look forward to for next year and Cowboy Basketball.

Despite continually losing players to the varsity because of injury and sickness, the Colome Cowboy "B" squad had its fifth straight winning season under Assistant Coach Larry Koth. The team ended up the campaign with a 10-5 record. The young Cowboys relied on good shooting and bench strength to out perform their opponents.

This year the volleyball team consisted of 13 enthusiastic and energetic players. The varsity ended the season with a 10-12 record, the best in the history of Colome volleyball. We placed 2nd at Districts and 3rd at Regionals. A big thanks to Mr. Gronlund for all the time, patience, and fun that he put into this year's season.

This year we had many young and eager vocalists ready to sing with all their might. We took several brave young individuals to a vocal contest in Lake Andes and also performed at the Christmas concert, and Spring concert.

To raise money, we sold fruit, deli sandwiches for the Super Bowl and also held a spaghetti supper.

Four of our outstanding singers - Teresa Fletcher, Karla Letellier, Kurt Letellier and Justin Heath went to All-State Chorus in Watertown to rehearse with other statewide students and give a concert.

A new challenge was presented to students wanting to learn more about choral structure and notes. A "Theory Club" consisted of: Alexa Rose, Teresa Fletcher, Wayne Krumpus, Ginger Roby, Marie Grayot, Alisa DeMers, Tammy Krumpus and DeLonne Rohde was started.

THIS YEARS ANNUAL:

Well what can we say? The 1989-90 Cowboy speaks for itself!

A lot of hard work was put into this "memory-book", and although it's difficult to capture an entire school year in a few pages, we took the challenge and dug right in.

To raise the funds needed we sold many, many ads, to many different companies.

We then began to put it together: gluing pictures, writing stories, and typing.

Throughout the year, we collected dozens of pictures. It was hard work, but the best reward was seeing the finished product.

1989-90 EDITORS

This year our school newspaper staff was busy, busy, busy! Under the guidance of the editors, Jody Flakus and Theresa Hermesen and our advisor, Mrs. Grayot. We energetic, enthusiastic, and thrill-seeking reporters set out to catch the scoop on the latest, hottest, and newest events!

And we ended up with such features as: "Can U Imagine?" and "Song Dedications!"

What can we say? We're a fun-loving bunch. And we hope we entertained our readers as much as informed them.

We'll be looking forward to next year with our 1990-91 editors, Jennifer Moyer and Jeff Leber.

The Future Homemakers of America had a busy year. To raise money they held a bake sale, raffled off a pillow blanket and a solar radio. They also had fun helping the PTA give a Halloween party.

They traveled to Kimball for a District meeting, and Vonnie, Laura, and Danta gave speeches in Sioux Falls for the State Meeting.

For Valentine's Day, they planned lots of fun for the student body. They made Knox-Blox hearts and also large cookies to sell. And each girl received a heart for "Silence is Golden".

The males, in turn, received Shamrocks on St. Patrick's Day.

What a year! We're juniors now (scary thought!) ... wiser to the ways of the world ... more experienced ... on the stair-way to adulthood.

But seriously ... We had fun. For the third consecutive year we won first place in the Float Contest for the Homecoming Day Parade.

We sold magazines and broke the all-time record in sales. Then we had fun spending the money to plan the prom and banquet. We had a blast writing the prophecy.

And of course ... Driving the teachers crazy (who, us?) was a scream. We can't wait till next year, though. Look out ... we'll be seniors!

Junior High Athletics were a huge success in the 1989-90 school year. Tops on the list was the fact that nearly 80% of the students in grades 6-8 participated in one or more sports. The best season was turned in by the football team as they compiled an unbeaten 4-0 record. Another highlight of the year was that the basketball and track teams wore much-needed NEW uniforms thanks to various fundraising projects. Because of this year's JH success in athletic competition, high school teams in the future will continue to be very competitive.
